Absolute Tabletop Hosts its First Tabletop Gaming Convention

Absolute Tabletop, an independent publisher of roleplaying game supplements, announced today that it will be hosting the Absolute Tabletop Convention (AbTabCon), its first physical gaming convention, in Tacoma, Washington on July 8, 2017.

The convention will be a small gathering at the Tacoma hobby shop and game store, Tacoma Games, and will feature live gaming, a Q&A, and previews of unreleased material put on by the company.

“This is more of a gathering of friends than a convention,” said Tim Kearney, one of the founders. “But it’s our first formal event as a company, and we’re excited to do something fun, intimate, and memorable.”

Attendance is limited, with a maximum of 50 seats available.

“We don’t expect to sell out, but we’ll be stoked to hang out with even a handful of our community members,” said Matt Click, one of the founders local to the area where the event is being held.

“We plan to have some sort of minor online component, such as streaming portions of the event,” said founder James Kearney. “But this is a physical convention. Our aim is to connect with everyone who makes it out to the event, and not worry too much about broadcasting it or getting it online.”

For more information about the convention, feel free to sign up for the mailing list devoted to updates for the event here.
